

CALVIN STUDIES

Papers Presented at a Colloquium on Calvin Studies at
Davidson College Presbyterian Church and
Davidson College
Davidson, North Carolina

March 19-20, 1982

PREFACE

The papers printed in this collection were presented at a Colloquium on Calvin Studies on the campus of Davidson College and of the Davidson College Presbyterian Church, March 19-20, 1982. They are made available at minimal costs through the generosity of two Presbyterians, one a North Carolinian who practices his Calvinist faith in business and the other a Virginian who is a minister of Word and Sacraments. Union Theological Seminary in Virginia provided the resources and facilities for preparing the manuscripts for printing where they were typed by Brenda Lee, faculty secretary.

John H. Leith
Pemberton Professor of Theology
Union Theological in Virginia

Charles Raynal, Pastor
Davidson College Presbyterian Church

CONTENTS

Preface

1. The Significance of Calvin's Tract Against the Anabaptists
for the Church Today Page 1

Charles M. Swezey, Professor of Christian Ethics, Union
Theological Seminary in Virginia
2. The Theology of Calvin's Tract Against the Libertines . . . Page 16

Ben W. Farley, Professor of Philosophy and Religion, Erskine College
3. The Importance of Calvin Studies for Church and College . . Page 30

Alexander McKelway, Professor of Religion, Davidson College
4. The Significance for Political Theory and Action of Calvin's Sermons on Second Samuel Page 40

Milner S. Ball, Professor of Law, University of Georgia
5. Note on the Historical and Textual Background of the II Samuel Sermons Page 52

Douglas Kelly, Visiting Professor of Theology, Reformed
Theological Seminary
6. Sermon VI - From Friday, the fifth day of June, 1562
II Samuel, Chapter 2 Page 55

Translated by Douglas Kelly
7. Sermon XXIX on First Samuel (I Samuel 8:11-22) Page 66

Translated by Douglas Kelly